SYD'S FISH.

Tom put his head into the little back parlor, where sat the ladies of the family. Syd—who had been growing sleepy over her sewing for the last half hour, with Belle writing a love-letter in the bay-window; her mother yawning over her account-book; and Grandma Greyson, nodding over her knitting by the fire—hailed his advent with delight.

"Syd!"

"Here, Tom! Whither bound?" queried Syd, rising and putting her work away.

"To the lake," waving his fishing-tackle before her longing eyes. "Proper cloudy day for fishing. Come along, sis!"

"All right, I will. Good-bye, grandma, and here's a kiss. Don't worry, mother. You needn't look so shocked, Belle, for I've been an angel all summer—haven't whistled for a fortnight. I will to-day, though!" muttered Syd, rebelliously, as she drew on her rubber boots and buttoned her waterproof in the hall.

"Girls didn't go trapsin' off so when I was young!" and grandma shook her head wisely over her knitting-needles.

"Seventeen years old," sighed Mrs. Greyson, "and such a romp!"

"Too bad, for she can be a little lady when she tries!" added Belle.

Meanwhile Syd, at once the pride and torment of the family, with fishing-rod over shoulder, was dashing through the wet fields, in the direction of the lake.

"How that girl does go!" muttered Tom, who brought up the rear panting and out of breath. "Syd! Hold on! It's a-going to rain. Here's the umbrel! Hold on, I say!"

Syd "held on" accordingly, her cheeks flushed, her eyes sparkling, her hair hopelessly down. Very pretty was Syd, especially with all that shining hair over her shoulders, and not at all "fast" looking either, though she could fish, swim, play ball, row, ride and shoot, as well as her brother Tom. The two "sports" aimed for a favorite fishing station, a sort of plateau, with a fringe of sturdy shrubs along the edge over-hanging a narrow strip of sandy shore. Just beyond was a deep hole, where the big fishes of the lake lay concealed.

"Stay here and fish, Syd, while I get some more grubs. There ain't half enough bait."

Syd nodded, and Tom darted away.

The fair fisher viewed the wriggling mass of worms in Tom's tin cup with evident disgust, took a thick brown paper from her pocket, opened it, disclosing fragments of fresh pork, and then baited her hook, whistling "Ye banks and braes" with all her might during the operation.

A fine-looking young fellow, sitting on a camp-stool beneath Syd's perch, looked up at the sound. It evidently disturbed him, for he frowned angrily up at the bushes that concealed the unconscious offender; but seeing no one, went on with his work. This was not fishing, however. An easel stood before him; he held palette and brushes in his hand. He was an amateur artist, probably. He had been trying in vain that afternoon to catch the effect of rain on water, and his failure had put him out of sorts apparently, for as the unseen whistler went from "Bonnie Doon" to "Captain Jenks," he contracted his brow and muttered something ill natured about "confounded boys."

But he was destined to a worse doom than this, for as the line, which had lain still in the water a few minutes, was jerked sharply up, a monstrous fish dropped off, and the hook, relieved of its weight, swung suddenly round, burying itself on the back of the artist's hand. He started up, uttering an exclamation more expressive than polite.

"Deuce take that boy!" said he with an emphasis so energetic that it reached unlucky Syd.

"Oh, my soul!" she exclaimed, and darted down the rocks.

Meanwhile the artist, holding his jackknife in his left hand, was endeavoring to open it with his teeth.

"Good heavens! What have I done?"

He looked up in astonishment, to see a lovely young lady with a mass of bright hair around her shoulders, and great, startled violet eyes, bending over him, looking very pale and anxious.

"Oh, I am so sorry! I didn't mean to! Please do forgive me? Are you very much hurt?" all in a breath.

So surprised was he at the unexpected apparition, that he didn't hear half she said.

"Nothing serious. Pray don't be alarmed. Nothing, upon my word! Only some confounded boy up above there, who has been distracting me for a half hour with his whistling, sent me this favor—by way of climax, I suppose."

Then he showed his hand to Syd.

"O!, sir, it was I! I'm Syd. I didn't know—I never—I—can I help you, sir?"

"Thank you, you can if your nerves are strong. I can't cut this out with my left hand. If you'd be so kind—"

"I'll try, sir. It's no more than I deserve as punishment."

Syd set her teeth and went to work. Calm and collected, her hand did not shake once, while she cut out the offending fish-hook, washed the wound, and bound it up with her handkerchief. But when the operation was over she was paler than her patient.

"Now, sir, we must go home—it's going to rain. And if you will only stop at our house a moment, mother will give you some wonderful salve that never fails to cure. You must let me do something for you, or I shall never forgive myself—"

"Don't apologize, pray. I ought to beg your pardon instead of having spoken so slightingly of your whistling. I think now it was a very creditable performance, full of spirit and grace. But if you must make some amends for your misdeeds, I'll burden you with this camp-stool to carry by way of penance. My paint-box and canvass will be all I can manage. Never mind the easel; that will be all right here."

"Tom can carry it, sir. Tom!"

That individual, who had been enjoyiug the dramatic scene from behind the bushes, now descended and followed the couple from afar, bearing the easel, and stopping only twice to stand on his head by way of expressing his hilarity.

In the middle of the afternoon, as Belle was looking listlessly out of the window at the driving rain, she gave a start.

"Mother, see here!"

Syd was at the gate, her splendid hair down, carrying a camp-stool in one hand, and with the other holding an umbrella protectingly over a tall young gentleman, one of whose hands seemed to be somehow disabled.

"Mr. Lester, Bessie Grant's New York consin! He's a distinguished artist, and is visiting at the Grant's during his summer vacation. What will he think of that wild girl of ours? Why, he's coming in, as I live!"

He was coming in, for Syd had said in an earnest tone,—

"Please stop, and let mother do something for your hand! Beside, I shall have to 'fess my wrong-doing, and shall want your protection."

"With pleasure, Miss Geyson. Only don't, Topsy-like, 'fess anything you haven't done."

"You think me bad enough without," said Syd, with a laugh, as they stood on the steps. "I have brought you a patient, mother," she continued, as soon as she had introduced them properly.

"I beg pardon, madam, for intruding upon you unceremoniously, but Miss Sydney tells me of some magical medicine you have. I was so unfortunate as to hurt my hand."

"I hurt it, you mean," interposed Syd.

"Well, yes, Mrs. Greyson," said Godfrey Lester, laughing, "I believe your daughter did mistake me for a fish." Here he bowed to grandma, who had advanced from her corner. "I assure you she found me a troublesome one, and had hard work to get me off her hook."

"How do you do, Mr. Fish?" said grandma, very politely.

She was a little deaf and had not got the run of the story. Poor Syd, in spite of her patience, was boiling over with suppressed laughter, and Tom stood on his head in the hall.

Mrs. Greyson bustled around, bringing lint, ointment and bandages, to bind up the wound, while Belle scolded Syd in an undertone.

"That Mr. Fish seems to be a very fine young man," said grandma, at supper, after Mr. Lester had departed. "But I didn't quite understand how he came to hurt his hand so."

Syd bit her lips; Tom choked, and was sent from the table in disgrace.

Mr. Lester came every day for a renewal of the ointment. He might have taken some with him, and thus saved so many journeys, but he never seemed to think of that.

After a little, a great change came over Miss Sydney Greyson.

"Syd's getting too poky for anything," said Tom. "She won't fish or shoot, and she says things are 'very nice' instead of 'joll.'"

"What a little lady Sydne is getting to be!" said her mother.

"It's high time!" from grandma.

"I know why," said Belle the sentimental, "Syd is in love!"

"Ah!" said grandma; "with Mr. Fish?"

For grandma would persist in calling Godfrey Lester Mr. Fish, to Syd's deep disgust and to Master Tom's infinite delight.

Long after the lacerated hand recovered, Mr. Lester continued his visits, probably because he had got into the habit of going to the Greysons', and habits are notorious tyrants. Syd suddenly took a contrary fit, indulged in freaks unaccountable, and was wilder than ever. Mr. Lester seemed to like her none the less for this. I think he understood it. Don't you?

One night, at a party, Syd was enjoying herself hugely in her own way; that was, by horrifying a group of interested listeners with accounts of her many escapades. To shock the dainty bells and effeminate dandies by her bold disclosures, delighted the wicked little creature.

She did not look like a hoyden, in her fleecy white dress, looped with purple panises, and pansies just the color of her eyes in her bright hair.

"You look like an angel, Syd dear," Belle had said. "Be one to-night, and let Mr. Lester see that you can be a lady."

This was well-meant, but mistaken advice, and had the effect, of course, of making Syd resolve to behave her very worst. And she kept her word.

"I really think I have been too angellic for anything this summer. It worries me to think of it. I fear I shall die young like the story-book seraphs, for I'm getting quite heavenly. Just think! I've been fishing only once this season. But that time I caught such a large fish—enormous! In fact—"

"Did you take him home, Sydney?" asked Bessie Grant.

"Of course I did!" replied Syd. "And—Mrs. Greyson doctored him up, and now he's entirely recovered."

And then Syd went on to tell how many birds she had "bagged" in yesterday's sport, and how she had drowned six kittens that morning.

"Oh! how could you, Syd?" cried Bessie.

"Because Tom wouldn't. Boys are too tender-hearted for that sort of thing," in a most matter-of-fact tone.

This was bad enough, but she went on from bad to worse, saying the most extraordinary things in the quietest, most ladylike way, and in the sweetest of voices.

"I've finished the business now," she said to herself, as she took down her hair that night. "I did my worst, and he's doubtless so disgusted that he'll never want to see me again. I don't care!"

But she sobbed herself to sleep.

The next morning Mr. Lester called, and found Syd alone in the little parlor. She was pale, but greeted him very composedly.

"This is a farewell visit, Miss Sydney; the last, probably of many pleasant ones. My business calls me back, and I leave this afternoon."

Syd's voice was very cool, but she dropped her work and stooped to regain it.

Goodfrey bent also, and as both rose, he looked straight into her face.

"Your eyes are full of tears, Syd darling! Why what's the matter?"

"My great grandfather is dead!" said Syd, in a doleful tone.

* * * * * * *

Two years afterward, a gentleman and lady were strolling along the banks of the Danube, where a number of sturdy little peasant lads were engaged with hook and line.

"Look at those little chaps, Mrs. Lester! Don't you envy them? Wouldn't you like to try it again, yourself?"

"No, indeed, Godfrey!" laughed Syd, prettier than ever, and quite as saucy. "My last exploit in that line cured me entirely and forever of my mania for fishing."

"Why so, Mrs. Lester? Were you disappointed in the fish you caught on that occasion? Are you dissatisfied with me, dear?"

I shall not tell you what Syd said; but I should say—judging from the tender light in her violet eyes, and the rapturous expression on the face of her "fish" at her answer—that she was not dissatisfied.

Why Whiskers Could Grow.

'Here's another lie,' said Mrs. Smith, who was reading a newspaper.

'What is it, my dear?' asked her husband.'

'Why, this newspaper says an Indiana woman was disinterred the other day, after being buried two years, and that whiskers four inches long had grown on her face since her burial. I don't believe a word of it.'

'I do,' said Smith.'

'Well, I don't. How could whiskers grow on a woman's face after she is dead?'

'Easy enough, Jane. She would hold her chin still long enough to give the whiskers a chance.' — Newman Independent.

Receipted the Bill.

How a Sharp Collector Suffered Loss Through His Shrewdness.

Mr. Kurry Kombs, the acute and astute collector of the Gas Company, strolled into the office yesterday, laughing as if his ribs had been tickled with a horse-radish grater.

'Oh, you should have been with me down at old Solomon Levi's just now,' he gasped, as he sank exhausted into a chair.

'Why, what's the matter with old Solomon?' inquired the obituary editor, as he leaned back and clasped his hands around the back of his neck.

'Oh, it's altogether too rich,' responded Mr. Kombs, when he had recovered his breath. 'You see I had a gas bill to collect amounting to $30, and when I presented it the old galoot said: 'All right, Mr. Gomps,' and going to the safe, he brought out a $100 bill and stuck it at me, saying: 'May be you can shange dot bill, Mr. Gomps.' I looked at the bill and saw at once that it was a counterfeit. I was going to lamn the old son of a gun, but an idea struck me like a pile driver. I had a lot of bogus coin in my pocket that I had been stuck on a day or two before, so I just receipted the bill and took his $100 bill and gave him the change in counterfeit coin. Oh, ho, ho, he, he, he,'—yelled Mr. Kombs, as he fairly rolled on the floor in the excess of his merriment, 'how the old sucker will kick when he tumbles to the sell.'

'Well?' said the obituary editor.

'Well,' said Mr. Kombs, 'don't you see how I played it on him? You are about as thick-headed as old Levi, it strikes me.'

'You say you gave him counterfeit money in change?' said the obituary editor.

'Yes, that's where I got ahead of him,' responded Mr. Kombs.

'And you took his counterfeit money?' said the obituary editor.'

'Why, certainly, and gave him the same kind of change,' Mr. Kombs replied.

'And you say that you gave him a receipt in full?' persisted the obituary editor.

'Why, of course, what's the matter with you anyway,' said Mr. Kombs, with a shade of irritation in his voice, 'didn't I do him up slick?'

'Well, perhaps that's a good way of doing business,' said the obituary editor, 'but I must admit that I am a little puzzled to see how the Gas Company got its bill paid in the deal. However, you slick collectors are a little above the comprehension of an ordinary newspaper man.'

Mr. Kombs slowly arose from his seat with a dazed expression upon his countenance. 'Well, by the shades of Jack China,' he ejaculated. 'I never thought of that. There's another thirty dollars gone out of my salary, and I thought I was just too smart to live.' And he wended his way sadly and pensively down stairs.

Advice to Young Married People.

"Drive gently over the stones!" This piece of advice, which is frequently given to inexperienced whips, may be respectfully suggested to the newly married. There are stony places on the road to happineess, which if not carefully driven over, may upset the domestic coach. The first rock ahead which should be marked "dangerous" is the first year of married life. Here, especially is the first step that costs; as a rule, the first year either mars or makes a marriage. During this period errors may be committed which will cast a shadow over every year that follows. On awakening suddenly from sleep we feel put out and rather cross. May not the young husband and wife experience feelings not entirely different when they awake to reality from the dreams of courtship and the fascination of the honeymoon? Everything must once more be contemplated after the ordinary manner of the world, once more with subdued feelings spoken of, considered and settled. For the first time husband and wife see each other as they actually are. Each brings certain peculiarities into the married state to which the other has to grow accustomed. They have now to live no longer for themselves, but for each other, and the lesson is not learned in a moment. In all things indifferent the husband and wife must be willing to yield, however new it may be to them, however different from what they themselves thought. Self must be sacrificed in order thereby to gain the help of another beloved existence. A lady once asked Dr. Johnson how in his dictionary he came to define pastern the knee of a horse; he immediately answered: "Ignorance, madam; pure ignorance." This is the simple explanation of many an accident that takes place at the commencement of the matrimonial journey. The young couple have not yet learned the dangerous places of the road, and, as a consequence, they drive carelessly over them.—The Quiver.

OLD JASPER'S LUCK.

The Astonishing Revolution a Lottery Prize Wrought.

Henry Christian, Cuba's partner in the barber business, tells a story on a venerable relative of his who lived down in Mississippi. Jasper was his name and a few years ago he drew a $5,000 cash price in a lottery. The sum was measureless wealth. The word millions conveyed to the guileless mind of old Jasper no idea of greater wealth than did the sight of his $5,000. He was a wood-sawyer by occupation, and his first act after getting possession of his money was to throw away his sawbuck and saw. He next placed $3,000 in the hands of a trusty white man of business, and with the remaining $2,000 he resolved to buy the universe—the earth alone being quite too insignificant to engage his attention more than a passing moment.

'Well, sah,' said Chris, 'de way dat old man did lope and frow hisself beat all. De fus' thing he did was to buy his ole woman a silk dress an' a red woolen shawl. Then he went fishin'—wouldn't carry no wums, in his mouf no mo' but got a box to tote 'em in. I never did hear sech doin's—never did shu'. Didn't have no good luck fishin,' no how, so he hired a double team from a livery man and went out ridin'. Co'se he took his ole woman 'long, and when he got back he jest give de hull rig away to a feller he seen comin' long de street and paid de livery man out-an'-out full value, an' didn't never see it no mo.'

'Nex'day he bought a dawg and then bought a collar for it, an' de collar was so heavy and big it choked the dawg to death.'

'On 'count of dat unlucky play he took his ole sow an' tied her to a pos' an' walloped her till he couldn't res'. Every time he'd fetch down de rawhide he'd say, 'I'll show whose yo' boss—who's yo' mas'r. I'll let yo' know I own yo', I does. Didn' I pay fo' yo'?'

'But the po' ole man got lef' soon after dat. Yo' see he bought a yacht and went out salin' on Mobile Bay. His ole woman tried to get him to let up on sailin'—tole him a squall was comin' an' he'd go down.

'"Never you mind, honey,' says Jasper, 'I pay for de squall, an' I'se gwine to hab it, an' no niggah ain't gwine to stop me.'

'He went, and shu' 'nough the squall fotched him. Over went his boat in plain sight ob de po' ole woman, and down to de bottom went Uncle Jasper.

'But when his drownded body was toted ashore nobody down Mobile way never did see no sech big funeral as dat ole woman got up fo' her old man.'—Detroit Free Press.

An Original Letter.

Just twenty-eight years ago, according to a recently-resurrected diary of a private secretary of the fifteenth president of the United States, Mr. Buchanan received the following letter from a rural postmaster in Illinois, who had just discovered that the regulations of the department required a quarterly report from him:

MISTER JEEMS BUCKCANNIN—Deer Sur:—Bein required by the instrucions of the Post office to report to you quarterly I heer with foolil that pleasin dooty by reportin as follers: The harvestin has bin goin on kinder peert like and most of the nabers have thare cuttin dun. Weat is hardly a ayerage crop on rolin land, but its all hunk in the hollers. Corn is yallerish and wont turn out more than ten bushels to the aker. The health of the kentry is only tolloble good, and colery has broke out 2 miles around from here. But there is a powerful stur on the subject of religion, and sixty of the bigest sinners in Macoupin county have jined the church. Two of Jack Kisers best settin hens pegged out last week, and the gaps is among the peepies. My health is not good, I got it so in my back. Give my luv to Mrs. Buckcannin and subscribe myself yours truly. All fur this quarter. JACK PLUMER.

Leaving the Farm.

The Journal of Education argues that if the young men from the rural districts, after receiving the benefits of education, desert the farms to engage in mercantile and other kinds of business, 'where they can secure for themselves a larger share of this world's comforts and enjoyments, with shorter hours of toil,' the schools ought not to be blamed, but praised, for affording them 'the grand opportunity.' This is a matter about which there is much difference of opinion. The boy ought not to get the impression that all the 'grand opportunities' are to be found in the cities. There are 'opportunities' quite as 'grand' in rural life, and the boy ought to be made to see them in order that he may not mistake his proper course. The disposition of young men to leave the farm does not need any special encouragement.

How He Bribed Him.

How a Texas Army Contractor Made Money.

Col. McCracken, U. S. A., was the chief quartermaster, stationed at San Antonio, Texas. He had advertised for bids to supply the post with corn, and the contract was to be awarded on a certain day. Col. McCracken was believed to be an honorable and conscientious officer who would not take a bribe under any circumstance.

Tom Rowell, of the firm of Rowell & Smith, was a sharp, shrewd business man, who was very anxious to get the contract to supply the post of San Antonio with corn, but he did not think it was quite safe to offer the quartermaster a bribe, as he had on previous occasions with other quartermasters. After thinking over the matter for some time, he adopted the following plan to carry out his purpose.

He called at quartermaster McCracken's office, and asked that officer in an insinuating manner to see that he got fair play when the bids were opened. Col. McCracken replied in a very dignified manner:

"The contract, sir, will be awarded to the lowest bidder."

Tom Rowell took up his hat and bowed himself out. In so doing he dropped on the floor an envelope containing five one thousand dollar bills, the name of the firm of Rowell & Smith being on the envelope.

Rowell immediately went to the office of the chief of police and notified him that he had lost an addressed envelope containing five one thousand dollar bills.

Rowell argued in this way:

"If Col. McCracken keeps the money, I'll get the contract, and I can well afford to let him keep the $5,000. If he, on the other hand, thinks I am trying to bribe him, and gets mad about it, I will simply say I dropped the envelope on the floor accidentally, and had no intention of bribing him, and that I didn't know where I had lost the money."

Rowell had scarcely returned to his office from notifying the police of his loss when in rushed Col. McCracken, his face flushed, very much excited, and holding the envelope in his hand.

"What do you mean, sir?" he exclaimed, "by trying to bribe a United States officer. This is an insult, sir," and he slammed the envelope down on the table.

Rowell made out that he was very angry at the insinuation. He pounded on the desk with his fist and roared out:

'And what do you mean, sir, by charging me with attempting to bribe anybody. I merely asked you to see that my bid was properly considered. I dropped that envelope without knowing it, and have been hunting all over town for it. I want you to understand, sir, that I am a gentleman even if I am only a civilian."

"Now, that's just a little thin," retorted Col. McCracken.

"Well, sir, I'll prove to you that you are mistaken, and then I shall expect an apology," replied Rowell, and going to the telephone he requested the chief of police to come immediately to the office of Rowell & Smith. That official was there in a few minutes, and fully confirmed Rowell's statement that he had notified the police of the loss of the money as soon as he missed it.

Col. McCracken was overwhelmed with mortification at having unjustly accused an innocent man of having attempted to bribe him. He was profuse in his apologies, which Rowell at length accepted.

The bids were opened next day, and it was found that Rowell's bid was not the lowest, but Col. McCracken, feeling he owed Rowell some reparation, decided that the lower bidders were not good, and gave the contract to Rowell, who cleared upwards of $25,000 out of it, without having to spend a cent to lubricate anybody.

Greenbacks are said to be so popular in Cuba as to command a large premium over any other money, whether gold or silver.

Democratic State Convention.

The Pennsylvania Democratic State Convention will assemble in the Opera House, in the City of Harrisburg, on Wednesday, August 26th, at 10 a.m., to nominate a candidate for State Treasurer, and to transact such other business as it may determine.

Under the rules of the party the representation in the State Convention consists of Representative Delegates, one for each 1,000 Democratic votes cast for the nominee for Governor at the last Gubernatorial election [1882] or for a fraction of 1,000 such votes amounting to 500 or more in the respective Representative Districts, provided that each Representative District shall have at least one delegate. The representation for the coming Convention is the same as it was in 1883 and 1884. Copies of the rules or of the apportionment of delegates will be furnished on application to the undersigned.

Orders for the purchase of Railroad Tickets at reduced rates, good from August 24th to 29th, over the P. & R. R. R., P. R. R., P. & E., and N. N. C. R. R., to Harrisburg and return, will be sent to Delegates and others, "entitled to be in regular attendance" at the Convention, upon application to the undersigned after August 5.

Delegates to the Convention, alternates or substitutes, County Chairmen and members of the State Committee, are requested to forward the names and post-office address of delegates at once.

W. U. HENSEL,
Chairman Dem. State Com., Lancaster, Pa.
J. B. LICHTY, Secretary.

STATE ELECTIONS will be held this year as follows: Ohio, October 11, Connecticut, Iowa, Minnesota, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Virginia, November 3.

THE Clinton County, Democratic convention, which met at Lock Haven on Tuesday renominated L. R. McGill, of Lock Haven for Prothonotary, James C. Smith, for Register and Recorder, Dr. J. S. Mader fo Coroner and John Simcox for Jury Commissioner.

AT last General Grant rests in his grave in Riverside Park, New York, on the shores of the Hudson. Two full weeks the nation was in an excitement over the funeral ceremonies. Hardly any citizen of this country ever received a more magnificent burial than Gen. Grant. Many thousands of dollars were spent for the last honor to the deceased hero, but the American people were willing and satisfied to have it so. The only objection raised is that in all the pomp the republican simplicity was somewhat forgotten.

THE Centre County Democratic Convention met in Hume's Hall, Bellefonte, on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and did its work in about two hours. The assembly was large and after an organization was effected by making L. T. Munson, Esq., of Bellefonte, chairman, the convention proceeded to make the following nominations:

For delegates to the State Convention—C. M. Bower; D. C. Keller, B. F. Hunter, L. H. Lingle. For delegate-at-large, Mr. Cassanover, of Philipsburg. For Jury Commissioner, Mr. Rhone, of Spring township and for Coroner Dr. Hoy, of Bellefonte.

ANOTHER NEW LAW, which was passed by the late legislature and approved by Gov. Pattison is, that after this a tax collector whose duty it shall be to collect all the taxes—State and County, Road or Borough, and School—will be elected in each city, township and borough by its voters at the regular spring elections in February. His commission will be five per cent. and his security must be double the amount of taxes collectable. He will receive his duplicates on the first of August at the latest. After that he must give public notice that he is ready to receive taxes and whoever pays his taxes within 60 days from the time of said notice will be entitled to an abatement of 5 per cent. Four months after the expiration of the sixty days no reduction will be made and after that 5 per cent will be added. When this law will go into effect the work of collecting taxes will be much simplified and it will pay a man to devote his time to it.

THE National League of the civil service association at their late annual session at Newport, N. J., passed several resolutions and among them one by Carl Schurz's motion which carried unanimously, endorsing the administration of President Cleveland. Another resolution ordered to send a copy of the foregoing resolution to the President.

The President's Political Callers.

Representatives Curtin, Randall and Weller—What They Want.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Representatives Curtin and Randall had about an hour's talk with the President before the Cabinet meeting to-day concerning the Pennsylvania appointments. They both looked contented when they came out of the President's private office, and Mr. Randall said their interview had been very satisfactory, though nothing was settled yet. What they want is to have S. Davis Page appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia in the place of Huidekoper, who is very unpopular among the Democrats. Then they want the Surveyor of the Port and Naval Officer, and the Marshals and Collectors throughout the State appointed before the President goes off on his vacation.

GEN. GRANT'S FUNERAL.

The Last Scene at Riverside Park, New York.

It was twenty-six minutes past nine when the undertaker lifted the coffin from its resting place under the canopy, and the Grand Army men took hold of the silver bars at its sides, and raising themselves, strode with it and with solemn tread down the stairs. Other undertakers' assistants had put in place the portable black steps that fit the end of the funeral car, which just then had been driven up to the steps, and while the regulars formed on the right and left of the railing that marked the passage way to the car, presenting arms as they did so, the men of Grant Post carried their precious burden down the stone stairs and up the wooden steps to its place on the platform of the great black van. Their heads were bared, and so were those of the clergy and doctors. Workmen at once screwed the coffin firmly in place upon the platform, and then brushed away their brown footprints from the sable drapery of the car.

While they were thus busied the Grand Army men and the detail of the Legion of Honor took their places in even numbers on either side of the funeral car, the portable steps were loaded on a two-horse truck, the regulars took up their positions on the right and left of the car, the doctors and clergy, the Mayor and the bustling police officials stepped into carriages, and while the island band played a dirge, the car and its escort moved out of the piazza and into Broadway. It was then ten minutes to 10 o'clock.

The Federal troops were far ahead when the body guard and its charge passed up the great artery of the city, the second division, consisting of militia and veteran organizations, falling into line ahead of it, and the Grand Army posts and others coming along behind it.

The line of march was up Broadway to Fourteenth street, Fifth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, to Broadway again and to the Boulevard, to Seventy-second street, to the end of Riverside Drive, and thus through the slender unfinished little park to the tomb. It is estimated that 30,000 men were in line. The rays of the sun were beating down with torrid fevor, and many of those who had gone through the long march were nearly exhausted.

As the procession moved up town it was viewed by nearly twenty miles of men, women and children, standing shoulder to shoulder on either side of the nine and a-half mile line of march. The behavior of the populace was subdued and decorous. It is calculated that between 400,000 and a half a million persons were in the double line through which the paraders passed and in the windows commanding a view of the procession.

At Riverside Park, the first of the column to appear within the enclosure was the carriage of General Hancock. This was at 1:15 p. m. The General had been compelled by illness to dismount from his horse at Ninety-fifth street, and was driven to the tomb in a carriage, his horse being led by the side of the carriage.

There was a sudden stiffening of the crowd all along the line at 4:30. Muffled drum notes are heard, soon followed by strains of sad music, which heralded the approach of the funeral car. Bugle notes are sounded. The sable drapery of the funeral car is seen and the melancholy music is heard more loudly and distinctly. Bishop Harris and Dr. Newman alight opposite the vault. Others follow closely. General Sherman and General Johnson step out of the same carriage and walk to their places arm in arm; once enemies in war and now friends in peace. It is noted that General Sherman's grim soldiery features appear to better advantage above a uniform than when surmounting the plain dress of a civilian. General Sheridan and General Buckner got out of the same carriage and paired off. It is with deep and sympathetic interest that the people look at the members of the afflicted family. Mrs. Fred Grant, Mrs. Sartoris, Mrs. U. S. Grant and Mrs. Jesse Grant are all there, heavily veiled. It is felt to be well that intrusive eyes should not observe their grief too closely. The Colonel's little daughter and son, who bears the name of his renowned grandfather, and Jesse Grant's pretty little Nellie are objects of tender interest. They carry flowers, but wear no veils. Colonel Grant, Jesse Grant and U. S. Grant, Jr., wear the look of men who have steeled themselves to the ordeal, as becomes men. The funeral car draws up opposite the vault, the black steps are placed at the rear of the car and the men of the Ulysses S. Grant Army Post, who have so faithfully guarded the coffin, lift it reverently for the last time, carry it down on the steps and place it on the cedar chest. Meanwhile, troops are everywhere in motion. Brilliant colors are flashing on all sides. Mournful music rolls wave on wave, seemingly from all sides.

The Grand Army ritual was first read and flowers and a wreath laid on the tomb, while all in and around the tomb removed their hats. The bishop's voice could be heard by all in the crowd around the coffin, but by no others. At the conclusion a buglar blew the familiar call, "Lights out," or taps, as it is called in the army. The effect was impressive. Tears streamed from Dr. Douglas' eyes as the Methodist Church services proceeded.

The little Grant girls, grandchildren of the General, laid flowers upon the coffin, and again the buglar blew the call, "Lights out."

At the close of the burial service the undertaker lifted the heavy double casket, and it was slowly shoved into the vault-like steel receptacle that is to hold it. When this was done Colonel Grant and wife led the family procession down into the vault, where they remained for several moments alone. When they emerged the iron gates were closed and locked by one of the undertaker's assistants, who delivered the key over to General Hancock. Turning to Mayor Grace, General Hancock formally tendered it to him, who in turn handed it to Commissioner Crimmins. From this time forth until the remains are removed for final burial the key will remain in Commissioner Crimmins' custody.

While the final proceedings at the vault were going on the long gray and white line of the Seventh Regiment had, with an instantaneous motion, turned its back upon the throng about the vault, and stood facing the great mass of people that had pressed close up from the river bank to its line. There was a simultaneous clicking of locks all along the regiment, and suddenly there rolled out a peal that sounded as though it had come from one gun. Not a straggling shot was heard. In this manner three volleys were discharged. Hardly had their echoes ceased rumbling back from the Bergen Hills across the river, when the Twenty-second, stationed just to the north of the Seventh, followed with a volley that was hardly less in unison. The two that came next were a trifle more scattering. The battery of artillery was on a knoll facing directly up the river, and from its four guns commenced thundering three salvos, which was still in progress when the first symtoms of disintergration manifested itself by the departure of the President and his Cabinet in two carriages, the first containing President Cleveland and Vice-President Hendricks.

There was more order in the dispersing then there had been in the gathering of the throng. Amid the din of cannonading and musketry the mourning relatives and the President and Cabinet were escorted to their carriages.

The Southern Exposition's Good Promise.

LOUISVILLE, August 9.—The Southern Exposition, which opens August 15, is in a more advanced state than any great exposition ever was so near its opening. The floor is already covered with the foreign exhibit that came from New Orleans and new displays from foreign countries are arriving every day. The thirteen acres in the main building will be crowded with interesting foreign and American exhibits and the art gallery, which will contain the best American display ever made and many other valuable paintings, is about completed.

Gen. Logan and wife having decided to make a permanent home in Washington have been spending most of the time for the past month in search of a suitable house. They have at last found one. It is what is known as the "Stone Mansion," situated at the head of Thirteenth street, on the beautiful hill which overlooks the city. It was formerly the residence of Dr. Stone, an old-time Washington and a wealthy slave owner. Gen. Logan intends to let the slave quarters remain as a monument of the past, and he and his wife will speedily transform the house and its lovely grounds into one of the most attractive and noted places in the district.

—THE Liver is the largest gland in the human organism and stands guard, as it were, at the portals of health. Properly performing its functions it eliminates all impurities and disease germs from the blood; failing in this misery and disease follows. 1,600 Deaths from Cholera.

MADRID, August 9.—The reports of cholera for Saturday show 4,382 new cases and 1,639 deaths throughout Spain.

PARIS, August 9.—Since the last report no more deaths from cholera have occurred in Toulon. In Marseilles there were seventeen deaths from cholera to-day.

Bonfires are burned in Madrid. The epidemic is increasing in Granada.

—NO ONE, better than the mothers, knows the amount of persuasion, threatenings and force required to induce the children to take, when necessary, a dose of the nauseating, sickening worm syrups; and no one more highly appreciates the virtues of McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders. So pleasant and easy to take, so effective as a worm destroyer, the dose so small that the children never know they are taking a medicine. There is nothing in the shape of a vermifuge that can compare with them. Don't be deceived. Take no other. Money refunded to dissatisfied purchasers.

Wonderful.

From the Pittsburgh Dispatch, Sept. 25th, 1880.

"Very seldom do we read of an actual case of recovery, where hope had altogether been lost, to parallel that which was Monday investigated by a Dispatch reporter, who had heard in various quarters persons talking to their friends of a cure, seemingly little short of marvelous, that had been performed. The plain facts in the case referred to, without exaggeration, are these, as they were learned from the mother of the young man, his pastor and other persons well known in the community:

"William Lincoln Curtis is the name of the young man in question. He is now employed at H. K. Porter & Co.'s locomotive works in Pittsburgh, Pa. A year ago he resided with his mother on Grant street. About that time he went to bed one evening with a violent pain in his shoulder, the result, he thought, of a cold. The next morning the shoulder was greatly swollen, the pain was intense, and aches were felt all through his system. His case was speedily developed into a violent form of chronic rheumatism, among the first notable features of which was the paralysis of his left arm.

"He gradually grew worse, and in a few months the elbow and knee joints and both ankles became enormously enlarged. In March last the cheek bones began to enlarge, and upon his left side particularly, spreading his face out of all resemblance to his former self. The pain in all his joints became intense; fever, with its deteriorating effects, was now added, and he became rapidly reduced to the semblance of a skeleton, while vitality reached its lowest possible condition, and his sufferings were of such an indiscribable character that those who most loved him sometimes thought it would be better if he was called away. At this time physicians well known in Pittsburgh informed his parents that they could give no hopes of recovery.

"The young man finally commenced taking that wonderful medicine, PERUNA. In two weeks quite a change for the better, was perceptible. In six weeks all the enlargement had been reduced completely, while in spirits and strength the patient was quite as well as he had ever been in his life. Nearly three weeks ago he resumed work as a machinist at his old place, able to perform as much labor as ever in his life.

"The mother of Willie Curtis, in stating all these facts, said: 'Indeed, I can not look upon the cure much less than as a miracle. I do not hesitate in sounding the praise of PERUNA, and in recommending it to all my friends.'"

The pastor of the church where the young man attended Sabbath school was visited, and he readily confirmed the facts of the deformed bones, the emaciated condition from disease, and of the doctors having given him up. He was greatly surprised at his improved condition. Said he, "If he had not spoken, I would not have known him."

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

—We would call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of that excellent institution, the Pennsylvania State College.

—The Reformed church Mite Society of Aaronsburg will hold an ice cream festival on the afternoon and evening of the 22nd of August.

—There will be preaching in the Lutheran church of this place next Sunday evening by Rev. M. L. Dietzler, in the English language.

—The three outlets of disease are the bowels, the skin and the kidneys. Regulate their action with the best purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters.

—The B. & L. Association met in regular monthly session last Monday evening and a special meeting was then appointed for this (Thursday) evening.

—Among other visitors of town is Mrs. Cearfoss and children stopping with D. W. Zeigler's, and Mrs. Springer, the mother of Geo. L. Springer, at Brown's.

NOTICE.—The new Process Roller Flour, manufactured by J. B. Fisher, Penn Hall, is for sale at D. S. Kauffman & Co's new store, Main street, Millheim, Pa.

—Mrs. H. H. Weiser and her daughter Teresta, who had been spending several months in the land of the setting sun, with friends, returned to this place the other day.

—Remarked by R. C. Joiner of Allen P. O. Hillsdale Co., Mich: "Nothing gave my rheumatism such quick relief as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil—believe it infallible for rheumatics."

—The real estate of Jeremiah Hoy, deceased, late of Gregg township will be offered at public sale by the executors, Israel Vonada and Sam. Wise, on Saturday, Sept. 12th. See bills.

LOOK HERE.—I cure Piles. I have a positive remedy for piles. By its use many cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. It cures as if by magic. Money refunded to dissatisfied patients. Address,
H.K. SUMMERS, Aaronsburg, Pa.

—The thanks of the Reformed Ladies' Mite Society of Aaronsburg are due W. T. Auman, T. J. Kister and Prof. Wm. T. Meyer for their able assistance in adding variety and interest to the programme of Friday evening's entertainment. The collection from different sources a mounted to $30.35. Notwithstanding the rain the attendance was very good and the affair was a success.

—Friday and Saturday were rainy days but since then the weather has been very fair. Some of the weather prophet would predict but very little warm weather in this month. False Prophets !

—Mr. A. J. Harter will have everything convenient about his new mansion on Penn street. At present he has men at work building a cistern and he also expects to dig a well at some future time.

—In another place we publish County Superintendent Wolf's notice of Teachers' examinations. He expects to strike Millheim on the 16th of September, and our prospective schoolmasters would do well to brush up in the meantime.

—The real estate of J. Adam Morr, deceased, on Main street, is advertised for sale by Michael Ulrich, Jr, executor, in this week's issue. The sale will come off on Saturday, Aug. 15th, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

—Dr. Calvin Fisher, of Boalsburg, accompanied by his son and daughter, spent a few hours in town last week. Miss Laura Mc Alister, of Mc Alisterville, and Miss Katie Musser, of Aaronsburg were also with the party.

—A. Harter, of the Millheim Grocery, gives notice that his delivery wagon will be at the camp at 3 o'clock, on Saturday afternoon with Watermelons, Sweet Potatoes and Peaches, Cigars and Bolognas. Ministers will be served gratuitously.

—We owe many thanks to Mr. & Mrs. John Keen, of near Millheim, for a basketful of delicious pie apples and a large and full grown head of cabbage. They seem to know the printer's way of thinking, "It is more blessed to receive than to give."

—On last Thursday Uriah Reifsnyder, of North street lost a cow, valued at $30. The cow got in among the rocks on the mountain near Michael Smith's, and broke her left hind leg. To relieve the animal from her sufferings, she had to be killed.

—P. S. Meyer is making preparations to have a well dug on his yard on Penn street. It there is one thing most desirable in a town it is an abundance of wells and cisterns, and Millheim certainly has that. In case of fire we generally have plenty of water.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—William Weaver and A. D. Weaver, executors of the estate of Frederick Weaver, deceased, late of Haines township, will sell the farm and mountainland of decedent, one mile east of Aaronsburg, on Friday, September 25th, instant.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—J. H. Frank, west of Millheim, gives notice that he has for sale a superior quality of Wheat, which he calls "Farmers' friend," for seeding purposes. Farmers desiring some of this excellent wheat are requested to apply to him.

—Mr. H. H. Weaver, of Aaronsburg, is gathering up signers for his petition to be appointed storekeeper at the Woodward distillery. Mr. Weaver is a veteran of the late war, a faithful democrat and a good citizen and we hope his efforts may be crowned with success.

—Frank Van Ormer, a former compositor of the Centre Democrat office, has left Bellefonte, and entered one of the large job offices in Philadelphia. Frank always was a bright boy and is sure to make his mark in the art preservatiye, for which he seems to have a special liking.

NOTICE.—Having been appointed agent by the Middletown Tube & Iron Company of Middletown, Pa., for the sale of their Iron Pipes, &c, all persons needing anything in this line will save money by calling on me.
W. H. BARTHOLOMEW,
20-3m Spring Mills, Pa.

—For soothing and grateful influence on the scalp, and for the removal and prevention of dandruff, Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal. It restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, stimulates the growth of the hair, and gives it a beautiful, soft, glossy and silken appearance.

Hay Fever Specific.

I found it a specific for Hay Fever. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost. Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found.—Frank B. Ainsworth, of F. B. Ainsworth & Co., Publishers, Indianapolis, Ind. 28-4t —Remarks have been made that so many smiling face are being noticed among the ladies who use the Penn Roller Flour. The simple reason is they have been getting such sweet and handsome bread from that flour that they are supremely happy and their husbands are in the same mood about it.

—Ayer's Sarsaparilla is designed for those who need a medicine to purify their blood, build them up, increase their appetite, and rejuvenate their whole system. No other preparation so well meets the want. It touches the exact spot. Its record of forty years is one of constant triumph over disease.

—The time for Real Estate Sales is here and we would call the attention of of our readers to the fact that advertisements of such sales will find larger circulation in the JOURNAL in this and neighboring townships than in any other county paper, this paper having the largest local circulation. Sale bills printed in good style and on short notice.

—On Monday evening the band serenaded the summer guests boarding at the First National Hotel, and the ladies and gentlemen showed their appreciation of the musical treat by applauding the boys heartily and by presenting them with some nervus rerum.

—On Monday the four dials of the town clock were fixed in place on the Ev. church steeple. It is thought that the clock will be running by next week. The bell on the old church has been removed and the necessary changes are being made to hang it in its new belfry.

—The real title of General Grant's book is "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant." If you buy the "Personal History of General Grant," you will not be getting the General's own work. There are imitations and counterfeits out. So be careful. Buy "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant," and you will get the right book.—Ex.

DIED.—Michael Ney, an old and respected citizen of Aaronsburg, died on Friday night and was buried on Tuesday forenoon in the Lutheran cemetery at that place. Services were held by Rev. M. L. Dietzler. Deceased was well known throughout this section of country, having followed the trade of carpet weaving for many years.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Reese VanOrmer, of Philadelphia, arrived in Bellefonte on Saturday an 5.20 p. m. and will spend this week at the home of Mrs. V's father, Dr. Swartz, on Penn St.—Bellefonte Daily News.

We are told that they are expected to arrive at this place to-day, intending to pay a visit to Mr. Van Ormer's sister, Mrs. J. H. Kreamer.

—We are pained to state that Mr. E. H. Long, of the firm of D. S. Kauffman & Co., is confined to a bed of sickness with a violent attack of brain fever. He had been complaining of headache for several days last week and was taken ill very suddenly on Monday morning. His genial countenance is greatly missed by his many friends who sympathize with him in this new affliction and hope he may soon mend from this sickness.

FESTIVAL.—There will be a festival held by the Evangelical Sunday School of Green Grove in the woods in front of the church on Saturday afternoon and evening, August 22nd, 1885, at which Ice cream, Cakes, Lemonade and a cold supper will be served in the best manner. The Spring Mills Cornet Band is expected to be present to furnish music. The proceeds are to go for the benefit of the Sunday school and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend and patronize the festival. E. C. H.

--Mr. Thomas Jacobs, an aged and respected resident of Pleasant Gap, met with a serious and as it proved fatal accident on Thursday last. He was helping at some farm work and while thus engaged fell from a hay mow, breaking one of his lower limbs near the hip and injuring himself internally. It was not supposed at first that his injuries were of a dangerous character, but as he did not rally and continued to sink, the worst fears were entertained. He died last Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. His remains will be taken to Altoona for interment. He was 80 years of age. He leaves an aged widow to mourn his sudden death.—Bellefonte Daily News.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE STREETBOY AGAIN.—On Tuesday evening about half past 8 o'clock an incident that might have proved very serious occurred on the diamond. Two of our smaller boys, Frank Foote and Milford Stover had a skirmish when the former in a savage fit of temper threw an open knife into the latter's face. The point of the blade hit Milford on the temple, inflicting an ugly cut, from which he bled profusely. His father soon appeared on the ground and at once attended to the wound and sent the boy home.

This case causes us to again mention the oft-repeated advice to parents and guardians to keep their children at home after dark. The street at all events is an unwholesome place for any child at late hours. They are apt to hear and see things which do not tend to elevate their morality and at the same time they are more liable to meet with some accident.

—The tax notices for the Millheim Borough School District are posted up and we notice in the letting of the necessary fuel that the board have reduced the winter term of school to five months. Upon inquiry we learn that the change was made with a view to economy.

The directors several months ago purchased an entire new outfit of school furniture from A. H. Andrews & Co., for the three school houses, a step that is certainly worthy of all praise, as the old desks and benches were in a very dilapidated condition. They also expect to replace the old stoves by new and larger ones in order to render the rooms more comfortable during the severe winter weather. All these improvements incure a heavy expense. The aim of the school board is to make it as easy as possible for the taxpayers and consequently they secured such terms as to enable them to pay for the new furniture gradually, namely in three annual payments. By reducing the six months' term to five months they save teachers' salary and additional expense for fuel and the rate of school tax remains the same as in former years. The gentlemen of the school board, besides deserving credit for their enterprise, may also be regarded as successful financiers.

—In accordance with the proclamation of our chief burgess the merchants of town issued posters last Thursday announcing that they would have their business places closed on the following Saturday afternoon, during the hours of 1 till 5 o'clock. The town was draped in mourning out of respect to Gen. Grant and memorial services were held in the Evangelical church at 3 o'clock, p. m., the exercises consisting of reading the scriptures, prayer, singing and an appropriate discourse by Rev. B. Hengst. Owing to the unfavorable state of the weather the attendance was not very large.

—We had the pleasure on Sunday evening of listening to a fine musical treat in the Lutheran church at Aaronsburg. Rev. Deitzler at that time had regular services which were attended by a very large number of people from Aaronsburg and Millheim. The church was almost uncomfortably crowded. The choir under the able management of Mr. Luther Stoyer, and assisted in his unexcelled manner on the organ by Prof. W. T. Meyer, of Shamokin, opened the services by a fine anthem, in which Miss Nannie Britt, of Wheeling, West Va., carried the solo parts in a very pleasing way. At the end of the services the lady rendered the well-known song "Consider the lilies of the field" and demonstrated beyond a doubt that she is a singer of high order and an accomplished and natural musician. She won the admiration of all her hearers by the volume and clearness of her voice, over which she seems to have perfect control. It was such singing as we do not hear very often in this vicinity.

Examinations begin at 9 a. m.; be punctual.

Teachers will not be examined in the branches in which their grades have reached 1 or 1¼.

Applicants, at the special examination, must present a written request, as required by decision 301, p. 140, School Laws of Pennsylvania.

"Proprietory of character is as much a requisite of the teacher as literary attainments."—Decision 310, p. 142, School Laws. To meet this requirement as fully as possible, all applicants must present testimonials of character from the Board for which they last taught, or from that for which they expect to teach.

The examination October 3d and 10th are intended for renewals, as well as for new issues, of professional certificates.

A meeting of directors is desired on examination day, in each district.

AARONSBURG.

Splendid—the band music on last Saturday evening.

J. C. Meyer, Esq., of Bellefonte, was here a few days visiting parents and friends.

Harvey Musser, Esq., has returned to Akron, Ohio.

Mrs. Ella Irey has returned to her home, Chester Springs, Pa.

Maggie Lenker returned to Lemont, where she is engaged in the millinery business.

Henry S. Gross and lady and the family of H. H. Yearick, all of Philadelphia, are here and the guests of Thos. Yearick.

The old Locust tree in front of Jesse Wert's residence in town, planted about 60 years ago by one Geo. Hess, was cut down last week. The tree showed no signs of decay.

The Lutheran festival on last Saturday afternoon and evening was a decided success. The net proceeds have not yet been reported, but the gross receipts amounted to the even $100.

Yes, he paid 25 cents for five buttonhole bouquets, then immediately offered 25 cents more to have them removed. There is big money in bouquets, Mike.

Michael Ney, who died last Friday night at about 11 o'clock, came to this county from Lebanon county, Pa., about 60 or 65 years ago. He commenced carpet weaving when but 18 years of age and has worked at that trade within a few weeks of his death. Mr. Ney was our oldest citizen having been four score and five years when he died.

ANOTHER.

SMITH TOWN.

Farmers are busy as bees this week.

Mrs. A. R. Alexander is company with a friend were visiting here last week.

A party of our young folks were to Bellefonte attending the show last week and by all accounts had an enjoyable time.

Milton Kern expects a very good watermelon crop from his patch.

Many of our people were to Aaronsburg on Saturday evening to attend the Lawn Social, which was indeed a very nicely arranged affair.

The disappearance of one of our boys on Saturday caused great wonder. But he was at home again on Sunday and sick.

Last week two young ladies from below Millheim were on our mountains berrying and got lost. They had already fixed on a place for the night when to their joy they met some one who put them on the right track

Where, oh where is the Smith Town correspondent to the Grit ? Please tell JUMBO.

COBURN.

John Stonebreaker is on the sick list at present. Hope to see him out before long.

Many of our folks expect to attend campmeeting near Millheim next Sunday.

The lumbermen band from Fowler gave their first open air concert the other evening. Their music was listened to by a large crowd of people.

A grand basket picnic will be held at Centre Hall on Thursday.

Samuel Ard bought J. J. Gabbel's house at this place for $1100. He will finish the buildings at once and will move to Coburn this fall yet.

A great deal of boat riding is going on at this place. We ought to have several pretty skiffs manufactured for that purpose.

A strong force of Aaronsburg mechanics were at this place last week. Some twenty of their best workmen were engaged by Hosterman and Kreamer.

The young boys who are in the habit of playing ball and throwing stones on the public streets should bear in mind that it is very annoying to our business men, especially when they consider that not one out of ten of them are able or would be willing to pay for a five or ten dollar window light in case they should break one. Z.

MADISONBURG.

Mr. Klinefelter has suspended work at his grist mill, in the upper end of town, intending to make some repairs.

William Keller and Albert Klinefelter are two happy men—with their girl babies.

On Thursday, Aug. 13th, Miss Fairy Shafer expects to leave Brushvalley, to make her future home at Reading, Pa., and to attend school there. By Miss Fairy's departure Madisonburg will lose a fine young lady. Our best wishes go with her.

Rev. Aurand, who for quite a while has been on the sick list, preached in the Lutheran church on Sunday for the first time this summer.

Albert Klinefelter has just completed the new fence around his yard.

STILL.

Spring Mills.

Dr. Wm. V. Runkle, an eminent physician of Philadelphia is at present visiting his aged mother at this place. The doctor looks hale and hearty.

On last Sunday as Mrs. Zeigler was driving to church her horse took fright and became unmanageable and made a wreck of the buggy. Had it not been that her brother, J. F. Heckman, was near at hand and at once held the animal until some of the neighbors came to their assistance, it would no doubt have ended more seriously. Mrs. Zeigler was injured some by jumping from the buggy.

D. W. Duncan, Esq., of Sunbury, is visiting his many friends at this place. Wallace is always welcome in these parts.

Making a Mule Understand.

Stonewall Jackson was never known to let profanity pass without a rebuke but once. The incident was reported by the chief actor in it, Maj. John A. Harman, who was Jackson's chief quartermaster, and a man of extraordinary qualifications. It happened at Edward's Ferry, on the Potomac, when our army was crossing into Maryland, in the Antietam campaign. Maj. Gen. D. H. Hill's division was crossing, when Jackson rode up, and found the ford completely blocked with Hill's wagon train. He spoke to Hill (who was his brother-in-law, they having married sisters) for allowing such confusion. Gen. Hill replied that he was not a quartermaster, or something that implied it was no part of his business to get tangled wagons out of the river.

Jackson instantly put Hill in arrest, and, turning to Maj. Harman, ordered him to clear the ford. Harman dashed in among the wagons, kicking mules, and apparently inextricable mass of wagons, and, in the voice of a Senator, poured out a volume of oaths that would have excited the admiration of the most scientific mule-driver. The effect was electrical. The drivers were frightened and swore as best they could, but far below the Major's standard. The mules caught the inspiration from a chorus of familiar words, and all at once made a break for the Maryland shore, and in five minutes the ford was cleared. Jackson witnessed and heard it all. Harman rode back to join him, expecting a lecture, and, touching his hat, said: "The ford is clear, general! There's only one language that will make mules understand on a hot day, that they must get out of the water." The General smilingly said: "Thank you, Major," and dashed into the water at the head of his staff.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

An "Honorable" Lad.

He Drew the Line at Personal Honor—A Wild Western Incident.

It is extremely refreshing to notice the fine sense of honor possessed by some of the rising generation in Virginia City. Last evening two youths, each aged about fourteen, met on C street, when the following dialogue took place:

'I say, Bill, you got my knife.'

'No, I ain't.'

''Pon your word?'

''Pon me word.'

''Pon your soul?'

''Pon me soul.'

'Hope you may die if you have?'

'Hope I may die if I have.'

'You ain't got my knife?'

'I ain't got your knife.'

The querist seemed to be still incredulous, but was on the point of giving it up in despair, when a bright idea occurred to him, and he returned the attack with:

''Pon your honor?'

'Oh,' said the other. 'now you touch me honor, take your danged old knife,' and he handed the article over.

'Well done, Bill,' said his chum; 'I allus knowed you was an honorable chap.'—Virginia Chronicle.

Clues all Around.

A boy about twelve years old reported to a policeman the other day that a robbery had occurred at the house under very mysterious circumstances. The sum of $25, which was in a china vase on a bracket, had taken wings.

"Were any of the doors or windows found open?" asked the officer.

"No."

"Any visitors in the house who might have taken it?"

"No."

"And you haven't picked up any clues, eh?"

"That's the trouble, sir—there's clues till you can't rest. I want to go off and camp out, and dad thinks I cribbed the money. Dad wants to go to Chicago, and marm thinks he's got the boodle. Marm wants a new summer wrap, and dad says she clawed them ducats for sure. The hired girl is going to be married next week, and dad and marm and me believe she raked in the stake to go on a bridal tour. Tell you what, mister when I see how many clues can be picked up on a little case like this it makes me anxious to know which of us will come out on top."—Detroit Free Press.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,

A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is

QUAKER

Is the Best

TABLE SAUCE.

Thousands of articles are now manufactured that in former years had to be imported, paying high import duty as it is now being done on Lea & Perrins table sauce; the QUAKER TABLE SAUCE takes its place; it has been pronounced by competent judges just as good and even better. The QUAKER SAUCE has Slowly but surely gained great importance and is replacing the very best imported sauce on the shelf of the grocer, the tables of the restaurant and the tables of the rich and poor men, greatly prized and relished by all on account of its piquancy, aroma, taste, strength and pureness. The inventor has by years of study of the secret virtues contained in the aromatic spices of the Indies and China, such as mace, nutmeg, cinnamon, genuine Jamaica ginger, and peppers and buds of trees unknown to most men, and by long practice succeeded to combine their extracts in such a liquid form as we now find it, of agreeable taste, and so invigorating as to be taken in place of stomach bitters. By manufacturing this sauce here, heavy import duties and freights are saved, and it is sold at a lower figure to the dealer, who making a better profit on Quaker Sauce can sell it to the consumer cheaper than the very best imported article hardly equaling ours. If your grocer does not keep it, write us for prices, etc. Sold in bottles or by the gallon.
